WHO WE ARE

JFRF has tackled issues impacting elders living in poverty for nearly two decades. We are known for our dedication to improving living conditions for impoverished older adults. Our goal is to help bridge the gap for older adults, families and communities as we support strategies to address the changing face of aging.

OUR WORK CONTINUES

The North Carolina long term care community began its relationship with the Jessie F. Richardson Foundation (JFRF) and the elders of Nicaragua in 2006. This long-standing partnership has had a tremendous impact on the lives of many elders living in the Hogar de Ancianos, or home of the elders, in Jinotepe. Many of our long term care partners, including providers and vendors, have witnessed these amazing results on the faces of the more than 35 resident elders of the hogar and the staff who work there.

Some of the things we have accomplished with the proceeds made from this event are providing much needed equipment, developing a pharmacy business, replacing water tanks and building a national training center for eldercare - the only one of its kind in all of Central America.

Perhaps the biggest impact witnessed in Nicaragua during this time of political unrest and in the aftermath of devastating natural disasters is, despite the halt in typical channels for donations and services, our capacity building and community development efforts have worked! The elders continue to receive essential items like food, water and medicine, and community members continue to be trained to better care for the elders in hogares.

The impact of your contribution is seemingly limitless in the people it can reach. Please join us and keep this impact going.

All proceeds go to the Jessie F. Richardson Foundation's programs benefiting indigent elders in Nicaragua.

Please join us for our 9th Annual JFRF Golf Tournament and help us reach our goal of raising $100,000 to continue helping these incredible elders.
